Texas A&M University-San Antonio adheres to high standards of academic excellence and admits students in accordance with their level of academic preparation without regard to race, color, sex, age, religious commitment or national origin.

Applicants should answer questions on the admission application accurately. If the university grants a student admission on the basis of incorrect information or omitted facts, which, if known, would invalidate the applicant's eligibility, that student's admission is invalid. The completed application and supporting documents (i.e. official transcripts from previous colleges and universities attended where degrees were conferred: bachelors, masters, and doctoral, and test scores) constitute the basis upon which the College of Graduate Studies determines eligibility for admission.

Applications will be processed after all required documentation has been received. An application is considered to be complete only when the College of Graduate Studies has received all required documentation, including completed application through GradCAS (https://gradcas.liaisoncas.org/apply/)required test scores, application fee, and official transcripts from previous colleges and universities attended where degrees (bachelors, masters, and doctoral) were conferred. Completed applications are processed in the order in which they are made complete. Applicants are typically informed of their admission decision within two to three weeks from the point of completion. Incomplete applications will not be processed and will be withdrawn by the university after the census date for the term. Admission decision processing turnaround times may vary as deadlines approach.

Information concerning all aspects of the admissions process will be emailed directly from:

Prospective students are strongly encouraged to apply early.

A student must be admitted to a graduate program in order to register for graduate level courses. This applies to students with an undergraduate degree from Texas A&M University-San Antonio, as well as from other regionally-accredited institutions.

Standards for admittance to a specific program are set by each academic college. Applicants must check the admission requirements to the program of interest before they seek admission. Initial evaluation of an applicant's documents is processed through the College of Graduate Studies and is routed to the respective graduate department for an admission decision.

Applicants who wish to change their graduate program, after admittance to a specific program, must submit a change of degree plan form to the new program's respective department's chair. If approved, the College of Graduate Studies will make the necessary changes to the student's application/record.
